About Toby

Toby has spent almost his entire career within the professional services market and his clients value his diagnostic skills, his ability to spot patterns and provide practical solutions.

He started as a salesman, became a Chartered Accountant, was then as a financial trainer, before moving into management education. Now focusing on leadership, his insight is the result of a deep understanding of how the professional services market is changing and the effects on those operating within it.

Toby is interested in how people become partners and how partners can accelerate their development to be the best they can be all the time. He has worked with new trainees through to senior partners. He has worked with many firms on the route to partnership, partner admission, new partner development and developing senior leaders in firms.

Toby has also worked extensively with business services in PSFs, both with the leaders of business services and the specific functions.
